

Ike's Address Fails to Halt 'Cut' Demands

By MARVIN L. ARROWSMITH
WASHINGTON (AP) — Demands for big cuts in foreign aid spending persisted in Congress today despite President Eisenhower's charge that economy advocates are gambling blindly and recklessly along a road to free world "disaster."

The President stripped off the velvet gloves last night in a nationwide television-radio appeal for support of the administration's $3,865,000,000 mutual security program.

He spoke of "those blindly striving to save the money that must be spent as the price of peace," and said he doesn't propose to "take that gamble."

A week ago last night Eisenhower made a strong pitch on television and radio for his general $71,800,000,000 spending budget for the fiscal year starting July 1.

Put at a meeting with newsmen the next day he refused to take a tough line with members of his own party in Congress who disagree with him on spending and other matters. He talked again at that time of the possibility of squeezing fat from the spending program.

Eisenhower went in the air last night after formally submitting his foreign aid program to the lawmakers during the day. In a special message he said it would be "supreme folly" for America to cripple its allies against communism "through an overzealous zeal to scrimp."

Committees of both the House and Senate arranged to start hearings today on his proposals.

In his talk to the nation Eisenhower came up with the fighting appeal of his second term after saying anew that the cost of peace is high.

"Yet the price of war," he added, "is higher and is paid in different coin—with the lives of our youth and the devastation of our cities."

"To cripple our programs for mutual security in the false name of 'economy' can mean nothing less than weakening of our nation."

"To try to save money at the risk of such damage is neither conservative nor constructive. It is reckless."

"It could mean the loss of peace. It could mean the loss of freedom. It could mean the loss of life."

"I know that you do not wish your government to take such a reckless gamble. I do not intend that your government take that gamble."

At another point Eisenhower called the aid program "a saving shield of freedom." He added that ending or weakening the program "would vastly increase the risk of future war."

Small towns in southern and eastern Missouri were hit by a rash of tornadoes even as workmen still dug in the rubble of Kansas City suburbs where less than 24 hours before a tornado claimed 37 lives and injured 200 persons.

Six persons were killed in a twister which leveled Fremont, a town of 207 which only 10 days ago was hit by a flash flood. One man was killed at nearby Van Buren and a hundred miles to the northeast several more persons perished in and around Desloge, 60 miles south of St. Louis.

Some 70 persons were left injured in the wake of the deadly black funnels. Hundreds were homeless.

The rapid-fire chain of tornadoes, spawned by the same sultry weather disturbances that gave birth to the year's deadliest tornado in Kansas City's outskirts at sundown Monday, struck the most vicious blow at Fremont.

There a twister sheared the second floor from a two-story brick school and then roared on into town.

River Is Still Dangerous in Tulsa Area

TULSA (AP) — The still dangerous Arkansas River posed a continuing flood threat to Tulsa and northeastern Oklahoma today.

The campaigning river created at 21.83 feet of Tulsa yesterday, more than a foot above Sunday's peak and the highest since June in 1923.

Flood stage is 19 feet and forecasters expected the river to stay above that level during the day.

Civil defense headquarters said late last night the flood still was considered "critical."

A massive search was continuing today for boys—either two or three—who were spotted floating down the flooding river last night from Tulsa.

They were not identified, nor were there any reports in the area of boys missing.

The youths first were spotted by persons near the 21st Street Bridge in Tulsa about 7:30 p. m. Some reported the boys were in a yellow rubber raft, others said they were clinging to a log.

There was a possibility rains dumped into the Cimarron River watershed Monday night might bring the Arkansas' level up again.

Burglars Get $60 From Two Drive-ins Here

Police are investigating two burglaries here in which thieves took about $60 in cash and some merchandise, Chief Jack Brown said today.

Last night Perry's Drive-in, at the Highway 67-A junction, was entered through the back door and the burglar got $35 in cash, cigars, gum and candy.

The previous night the Dairy Queen on East Third was entered through a rear window and the thief took $25 in cash. So far as could be determined nothing else was missing.

Animal Repellent Scents Becomes a Big Business

By HANNS NEUBOURG
KASSEL, Germany (AP) — A small, small six-floor chemical laboratory here has won a reputation with animal lovers in the continent.

It turns out one of the world's strangest commercial products: animal-repellent scents.

It took many years of research for Dr. Robert Hildebrandt to build up his present stock of more than 150 synthetic and natural scents, ranging from the sweet fragrance of a cherry blossom to "lion 4" — extra strong.

"As a psychologist, I learned that scents influence the animal's mental life more than anything else," Hildebrandt says.

But it took 50 testing stations all over West Germany to find out the exact reaction of an animal to different scents.

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — What makes Gov. Orval Faubus run?

Or, more appropriately, for what is the Arkansas governor running? The 1957 lawmakers had scarcely left Little Rock when Faubus took to the stump with a vigor usually reserved for the windup of a hot campaign.

Not an ornate spade had turned a bit of sodden Arkansas soil to herald the start of a new plant without the governor being on hand to do the digging or watch it. He has eaten lunch in hotel meeting rooms with such regularity he must feel like a professional luncheon speaker.

Semingly no audience is too big or too small to get the governor's best booming attention and never was the Faubuses more prevalent.

From Fayetteville to Magnolia and from Forrest City to Fort Smith, Faubus has been bubbling over with his own effective brand of folksy talk and humor. But all the while it adds up to a pattern: a man with a mission and motive.

Probably not even the governor himself has made an irrevocable plan for the future but a couple of isolated facts certainly point to the definite possibility that Faubus will be asking for the same office about 16 months from now.

At Fayetteville he generously heaped praise on Rep. J. W. Trimble, giving him credit for pushing Pea Ridge National Park nearer a reality.

Political sees talked about him lacking Sen. John McClellan after Faubus' easy second term victory. McClellan's work on the special Senate investigating committee has made him an imposing force for any opposition and none has suggested that Faubus would entertain the thought of opposing Sen. William Fulbright.

There is still talk of him running for Rep. J. W. Trimble's post if Trimble should retire but this lacks the substance of the third term rumble.

Faubus proved during the 1957 session he is no political flake and that his influence in Arkansas has added weight perhaps faster and more consistently than any second term governor in recent times.

His speaking has probably improved as much as his acumen. And his handling of the tax increase proposals was nothing short of masterful. Taxation has been responsible for many political graveyards.

Another straw in the wind indicating an interest in a third term has been the persistent way the governor has, in his host of speaking engagements, defended his tax-spending program despite the ease with which he had them adopted.

A man with no political goals in mind would have accepted his victory in the Legislature and turned attention elsewhere. Faubus has repeatedly given answers to mythical questions, touching all bases, which would likely come up in a future campaign.

A glance around the arena seems to indicate that — at least this far from the next gubernatorial war — opposition to a third Faubus term would be weak enough to make the try worth while.

At least one thing is certain. Gov. Faubus is taking his practice laps around the track with such fervor as to indicate he expects to be running a race.

Council Acts on Routine Measures Only

Only routine measures were acted upon last night in a regular session of Hope City Council.

The group asked the board of public affairs to take bids on a new police car according to specifications; reduced from $100 to $80 the fee charged to Carter Sutton for the use of the city fire truck when his store burned recently.

Accepted a low bid from Greening Insurance Agency of $1,024.75 for a liability policy on city owned vehicles; voted to pay all election bills; agreed to renew a lease to the Selective Service for office space in City Hall and hired Wayne Johnson as fireman to work during vacations.

Everyone Is Urged to Buy a Poppy

"We hope that everyone in the city will wear a poppy Saturday, May 25," said Mrs. C. E. Weaver, president of Hope Auxiliary Unit No. 12, as preparations for the poppy day are being completed.

"A poppy on every lapel will show that this is a city which remembers with honoring gratitude those who gave their lives defending our free country. Wearing a poppy is a personal salute to the memory of those who died for America."

Coins dropped into the contribution boxes of the workers will go into the rehabilitation and child welfare funds to help support the work we are constantly doing for disabled veterans and children of veterans.

Ex-Arkansas State Player Is Coach

JONESBORO, Mo. — Arkansas State College yesterday hired former Indian football player Jesse L. Johnson as line coach.

Johnson will join the staff of Head Coach Gene Harlow. The Blytheville native played tackle and guard under Harlow in 1955. He served as graduate assistant coach last season.

Harlow called Johnson's appointment "a definite step toward obtaining a top-flight coaching staff" for the college. He said, "This puts us on a comparative basis with most of our opponents."

Johnson earned four football letters at Blytheville and picked up four more at Arkansas State.

Kansas City Death Toll Reaches 37

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Disaster workers totted up today this toll from the tornado which drenched Kansas City's southern suburbs Monday night:

37 dead, 150 still in hospitals, 418 homes destroyed, 470 damaged, 44 business houses destroyed, 75 damaged.

Gov. James T. Blair asked for 25 million dollars in federal relief funds to clear away the wreckage and restore streets, highways, schools, water and sewer systems.

In a telegram to President Eisenhower, the governor said: "Damage, hardship and suffering so severe that federal assistance is required to supplement the efforts of state and local authorities."

The governor asked a disaster area designation for Martin City, Grandview, Hickman Mills and Ruskin Heights — suburban communities a dozen miles south of downtown Kansas City.

The Red Cross started a special campaign for disaster relief funds and estimated it would need a million dollars to help 1,000 families.

The last of the 37 bodies was identified last night after disaster workers had picked slowly through the wreckage all day long.

President in Plea for Aid Money in Full

By MARTIN ARROWSMITH
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower said today about half of the $2½-billion-dollar cut in defense funds voted by a House committee would cut directly into the nation's guided missile and aircraft programs.

The country is going to suffer if the reduction approved by the House Appropriations Committee is allowed to stand with respect to those fields, Eisenhower told a news conference.

He also said he never will agree to a tax cut while the budget is in what he called its current precarious state of balance.

Discussing the $2½-billion-dollar defense reduction approved by the House committee, Eisenhower said about $1,300,000,000 of it is not a budget cut at all but a book-keeping tactic.

He went on to say that $1,200,000,000 of the proposed reduction would, however, cut directly into the defense program in such fields as aircraft and guided missiles.

AUDIT BUREAU OF CIRCULATIONS

End of Audit Report.

WHAT IS ABC?

The Audit Bureau of Circulations, Chicago, by its own definition is: "A co-operative association of advertisers, advertising agencies and publishers for the verification of circulation of newspaper and periodical members in the United States and Canada."

It is controlled by those who buy advertising (manufacturing, merchandising and service companies, and their agencies) rather than those who sell advertising (newspapers and magazines).

COST OF ADVERTISING

Pick up an invoice for newspaper advertising and you will find that you are billed for so many column-inches at so much per inch. That's how it is billed — but that isn't how it is sold.

The price of an inch of advertising is meaningless unless you know what the paper's circulation is. When you know that you know the cost.

The cost of advertising is the cost per inch per thousand circulation. That's the great yardstick by which advertising is bought and sold from coast to coast. The national advertisers call it "the milline" — the cost per line (1/14th of an inch) per million circulation.

Now you know why ABC audits are important. They verify circulation — the factor which is combined with the publisher's charge per inch to establish the advertising cost yardstick.

IT'S CHEAP TODAY

Hope Star's local advertising costs about the same today as in 1929. The rate-per-inch is higher, it is true — but circulation also has increased. Here is the comparison:

	1929	1957
Local "open" rate per inch per thousand	20c	21.8c

And that's a performance we feel deserves a page advertisement all its own.

Stars Moving Out of Famous Film Capital

By BOJ THOMAS

MEXICO CITY (AP) — What has happened to Hollywood, once the undisputed entertainment capital of the world?

More and more stars — like Marilyn Monroe, Ava Gardner, Stewart Granger, Jean Simmons, Joan Crawford — have moved their homes to other parts of the country or the world, coming "home" only to make occasional movies.

This is an important change from Hollywood of the 1930s and 1940s. I got some insight on the change from another of the famed evacuees, Tyrone Power. He has kept his Hollywood house because he wants a permanent home for his two children by Linda Christian.

But Ty prefers to go where his career takes him — to Paris and here for "The Sun Also Rises," to England for stage and screen work. He also keeps an apartment in New York.

I caught him in a relaxed moment in his Hotel Barmer suite and asked why he, a longtime Californian, had finally given up the sunny state.

"One reason is the weather," he said. "When I was working at Columbia, I noticed the smog really affected me quite badly. It's a terrible situation."

"And then there's the traffic. I didn't realize how bad it had gotten. Drives that used to take 20 minutes now stretch to 35 and 40."

"Another reason is what has happened to Hollywood itself. There used to be a fairly well defined movie colony of people you knew. Now a lot of those people have gone away and others, not necessarily of the movie business, have come in."

"Movies used to be of supreme importance in Hollywood. Now they are just an adjunct."

The newcomers to Hollywood don't have the flair of their predecessors, he commented. I agreed, declaring such colorful figures as himself are missed.

"Granted Errol Flynn and I are ageing," he laughed. "You'd think there would be young ones coming along to take our places. But the things the new people do seem a little chintzy. They don't have much flavor."

I asked him if he was planning to add to the movie lore with another marriage.

"No, no," he protested. "I won't say I'll never marry again, because that's pretty final. But I'm very happy the way I am now."

"I know several girls here and there who are excellent company and who have no thoughts of matrimony. Those who do are quickly discovered and eliminated."

"I've been single again for two years now, and I like it this way."

After an afternoon with his children, who are staying with Linda's mother here, Ty was preparing to go to the Mexican theater. He marveled at the theatrical activity here — 30 companies. He has long been stage-struck and spoke of the enthusiastic audiences in Dublin and London, where he played last year.

"The theater belongs to everyone over there," he said. "It's too bad that it's so expensive in the U.S. If it weren't for expense accounts, I don't know how it would survive. Most guys can't afford the theater unless they can put it on the swindle sheet."

Turbulent Storms

expire at 2 p. m. Storm damage to buildings, houses and electric and communications lines was reported from Cabot, a few miles northeast of Little Rock; to Blytheville on the northeast corner of the state. The wind and rain struck as tornadoes swept across Missouri for the second straight day. One twister, near Poplar Bluff, was only a few miles from the Arkansas border.

Searcy, Jonesboro and Cabot apparently suffered the greatest damage from the wind. Three persons were injured at Searcy and two were injured near Little Rock in an unusual accident.

A slowly moving Missouri Pacific passenger train brushed against a wind-torn tree a few miles northwest of Little Rock and the heavy branches broke windows before the train could be stopped.

Wind and lightning struck parts of Arkansas last night and early today, falling trees, damaging buildings and disrupting electric service and telephone communication.

Four persons were injured, none seriously. A series of U. S. Weather Bureau alerts warned of possible tornadoes in some of the state for more than 12 hours, but nothing that could be identified definitely as a twister developed before the last alert expired at 4 a. m. today.

The Searcy and Jonesboro areas apparently suffered the greatest damage from wind, and two persons were injured in and near Searcy.

Two others were injured in an unusual accident resulting from heavy winds in the Little Rock area. These two were on a Missouri Pacific train which brushed against a wind-torn tree partly obstructing the tracks near Marche, northwest of Little Rock. The heavy branches broke out windows before the train could be stopped, and two men were cut by flying glass.

Newspapers in New York City today are published in nineteen different languages.

DOROTHY DIX

He's a Charmer,
But Unreliable

Dear Dorothy Dix: My fiancé does not believe in saving for the future. He's the happy-go-lucky type who spends or gives away every cent he makes. I'm 25 and think it's about time I settled down. I'm willing to save my money.

Dear Evelyn: The happy-go-lucky type is usually full of charm but unreliable. It's virtually impossible to make one over. You'll wait a long time for him to have a bank account. If you want him, you may have to compromise. Is he worth it or not?

Dear Dorothy Dix: Why does a boy suddenly drop a girl after dating her for a year? F. F. Dear F. F.: He's had a change of heart. That's all. Dropping a girl suddenly is callous, but many very young men have not acquired the gracefulness to give reasons.

Dear Dorothy Dix: How can I get an answer to a problem through your column? I do not desire a personal reply. Have I any assurance that my letter will be answered, or must I give my address to be absolutely certain of a reply?

Dear Miss X: To be absolutely certain of a reply, you must supply your name and address on a stamped envelope. My mail is heavy and if every anonymous letter were to be answered via the column, I would need more news space than any paper has at its disposal.

You needn't worry about my signing your letter. It will go as sacred and guarded as carefully as the gold at Fort Knox. Send me your problem and it will receive most careful consideration.

Dear Dorothy Dix: My daughter is soon to be married. Since my divorce and remarriage ten years ago, she has made her home with my parents. She gets along well with her step father, but she wants her grandfather to give her away. Is there any way my husband could participate in the ceremony?

Dear Mary: He can be a gracious guest.

Budget Cut Drive Is Over 4 Billion Mark

By WILLIAM F. ARBOGAST

WASHINGTON (AP) — A $2,586,775,000 cut in recommended new funds for the Defense Department has boosted the congressional budget-cutting drive over the four billion dollar mark.

But there was considerable difference of opinion today among House fiscal experts as to how much of the reduction is real and to what extent it will affect overall government spending in fiscal 1958 starting July 1.

The White House declined comment on the committee action pending a detailed study. Appropriations Committee members said the "actual" cut in new funds for the Defense Department recommended yesterday by the committee amounted to from $1,200,000,000 to $1,900,000,000.

The difference between those amounts and the $2,586,000,000 listed by the committee as reductions from President Eisenhower's requests is in the area of bookkeeping may have to be restored later.

Rep. Mahon (D-Tex.) chairman of a subcommittee that drafted the $33,541,225,000 measure, told newsmen he considered "the actual cut" to be about $1,900,000,000. But he said he had no idea of how much the cut would reduce spending next year. Much of that spending will be from funds previously appropriated.

Funds appropriated by Congress in one year are not always spent the following year. For example, the defense bill appropriates 300 millions for a new atomic attack carrier, but the entire amount won't be spent until the vessel is commissioned some years from now.

More than 5 million people are attending adult education classes in West Germany this year.

Lawyer Role Adds Jeff's Name to Illustrious List

Jeff Chandler

When Jeff Chandler accepted the role of a brilliant criminal lawyer in Universal-International's "The Tattered Dress" which opens Sunday at the Saenger theater, he knew he was accepting a challenge, because his performance would inevitably be compared with the work of a multitude of great stars who have played similar roles on the screen.

Challenge notwithstanding, the role in "The Tattered Dress," which was filmed in Cinemascope with Jeanne Crain, Jack Carson, Gail Russell and Elaine Stewart as Jeff's co-stars, is the sort of part that no actor could resist.

It's the sort of part that can enable an actor to make screen history, for it requires him to hold the attention of the audience virtually alone for long minutes at a time keeping the drama and sus-for "gross misuse" of hundreds of thousands of dollars in Teamster funds as charged by the Senate Rackets committee. The move gave English open backing of labor's high command in his efforts to oust Beck.

English promptly announced he would support Teamster Vice President John T. O'Brien of Chicago for Teamster president in September. O'Brien already has said he will run for the giant union's top post.

The full loan secretary-treasurer also said he will run for reelection. Sources said he will run with O'Brien on a "clean up" ticket that may face opposition from other candidates should Beck be toppled.

Sources also predicted that Teamster Vice Presidents Sidney Brennan of Minneapolis and Frank Brewster of Seattle Wash. will not run for reelection. Brennan has been convicted of accepting $5,000 from an employer for a "strike breaking" scheme and Brewster was deeply involved with Beck in the Rackets committee investigation.

pense at a high price by his sheer acting ability and personal magnetism.

Well-remembered in Hollywood history are the performances of Lionel Barrymore in "A Free Soul," John Barrymore in "Counsellor At Law," Lewis Stone in "Madame X," Warren Williams in "The Great Mouthpiece," William Powell in "Evelyn Prentice," Robert Young in "The Trial of Mary Dugan," and more recently, Glenn Ford in "Trial" and Jose Ferrer in "The Crime Mating."

"The Tattered Dress" presents Jeff Chandler with a fine opportunity to add his name to that distinguished list, for he holds the centre of the stage during two long trial scenes. These scenes were shot consecutively and that fact required Jeff to memorize more than eight pages of dialogue each day for seven days in a row. It is estimated that, counting rehearsals and repeating scenes for filming at various angles, he spoke some 150,000 words during those seven days.

With some of the scenes running as long as six minutes in a single "take," Jeff readily admits that his lawyer role was the toughest he has ever played, but he adds quickly that it was also "the most satisfying."

Off the coast of Cuba is the Isle of Pines, which produces mostly grapefruit and marble. But, it is better known as the setting of Robert Louis Stevenson's classic, "Treasure Island."

Bockman Asks That License Be Restored

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Dr. James W. Bockman of West Memphis yesterday asked Pulaski Circuit Court to reinstate his Arkansas medical license which was revoked by the state Medical Board.

The board, on April 22, revoked the license on grounds that Bockman had obtained it fraudulently, that criminal records showed three convictions and that he had not graduated from a Kansas City surgical college as he had claimed.

Bockman's petition in Circuit Court, contended, among other things, that the board's proceedings were void because it had no jurisdiction under a 1957 Medical Practice Act which became effective March 11 and repealed all previous medical practice acts.

CHAPTER XVII

I turned around. Baron Gambero had come up behind us while I was watching the three men. "Not bad," I said. "You must have at least three or four lots here."

He gave me a bleak smile. "Only 1,250 acres," he said. "It has been in my family 1,000 years."

"It's a good thing you kept up the taxes," I told him. "It would be tough to have to pay them all at once."

Gianna was trying unobtrusively to catch my eye so she could signal me to go easy.

"You are a very refreshing personality, Signor March," he said. He saw me looking to where the three men were entering the wine cellar. "You are interested in what my guests have brought me?"

"Not especially," I said. "It's probably not in my line."

"I don't imagine it is," he said. His tone might have been a threat and it might not. "These last arrivals recently returned from Japan and they brought me some sake."

"Sake?" Gianna said. "Japanese whisky," I told her. "A rough but accurate description," the baron said. "I am planning a Japanese party next month. If you are still in Rome, Signor March, you must come."

"I'd love to," I said. I looked at him. "I've even got a suggestion for you. Why not hold the party at the Queen of Heaven?"

I knew, and I was sure he did — it was the name for Rome's oldest prison.

He knew, but he didn't blink an eye. "A very amusing suggestion," he said. "I must speak to one of my friends in the government about it."

"I'm sure it could be arranged," I told him.

"I will consider it," he said thoughtfully. "Well, I am most happy that you are enjoying yourself, Signor March." He turned and marched back to the house.

"I don't get it," Gianna said. "It sounded to me like you were needing him."

"It's an old March tradition," I said. "We don't like barons. And that's been in my family for 1,000 years. Come on and show me the house."

We went into the house and she showed me the downstairs rooms. There was a game room, a billiard room, a library, an art gallery, a small theater and, of course, the dining room.

The place had really filled up. There must have been close to a hundred people there. Among them I saw at least one more face I recognized. Ugo Marrone, the Communist.

When dinner was finally over, we all struggled into the theater. Now we were going to get the singing and dancing. I managed to make sure that Gianna and I sat well toward the back.

As soon as we were all seated the show started. I slipped out of my seat without even Gianna's knowing I was leaving.

I wasn't sure exactly where to meet Piero, but I thought it wouldn't be too close to the dock. I walked down along the beach. As I reached the fence, I became aware of a shadowy figure leaning against it.

"Piero?" I said softly. "Yes," he said. "I was wondering how long it would take you to get here. How are things up there?"

"They're all watching a burlesque show. I hope you realize how loyal I am to come out at a time like that."

"I shall recommend the medal of valor," he said. "Have you learned anything yet?"

"Not a thing except that the baron's parties make stranger bedfellows than politics ever did," I said. "You here alone?"

"No. I have two men with me. They have worked for a long time trying to get Gambero and dwere willing to put in some overtime on their own."

"Farther up the beach, the hill dips I hand there's a concealed spot. We've been here since this afternoon."

"Would you know if the big yacht has been here before?"

"It has. One of my men mentioned that he'd seen her before. Why?"

"The crewmen carried three cases of something ashore for the baron. He saw me watching and came over to tell me that his friends had just come back from Japan and had brought him three cases of sake. Japan is pretty close to Red China."

"Maybe you've got something," Piero said. "But we can't get a search warrant unless we have some real evidence. Think you can find out?"

"I'm going to try," I said. "I'll do it tonight, but it may not be a good time. That bunch is drinking so much they probably have to send a servant after more liquor every few minutes. If not tonight, I'll try tomorrow. One way or another."

Pleads Not Guilty to Murder Charge

EL DORADO (AP) — Pete Augusta Brown, a 21-year-old Negro, pleaded innocent today to charges of first degree murder in the fatal shooting of 20-year-old Verna Williams at nearby Huttig last night. Circuit Judge Cladde Love appointed attorney J. S. Thomas to defend Brown and set trial for June 18.

State Trooper Odis Henley said the Williams girl was killed by a bullet from a .22 caliber rifle last night. The shooting occurred at the home of Lee Benie Dickson, 20, who, Henley said, was apparently the intended victim of the gunman.

The Dickson girl was also shot and is in fair condition with a head wound at a hospital here.

Henley said a witness, Huey Barr, told him the shot that struck the Dickson girl was fired through a window. Barr said the gunman then entered the house and fired three shots at the Williams girl, who was attracted from the kitchen by the first shot.

Coroner J. H. Pinson Jr. said a neck wound was cause of death. Henley said Barr described Brown as a "rejected suitor" of the Dickson girl.

87-Year-Old Man Foils a Bank Robber

RICHMONDVILLE, N. Y. (UP) — An alert, 87-year-old bank president foiled a bank robbery attempt by a stocky, gray-haired mother of 14 children here yesterday. The woman, Mrs. Leona Williams, 50, was seized by employees of the bank of Richmondville moments after she handed a cashier a note demanding that he fill a bag she carried with money. Police said she held another bag in her hand which the note implied was filled with explosives. It was found later to contain an empty glass jar.

Her accomplice, Floyd Miller, 47, sped off in a car when Mrs. Williams was seized. He killed himself with a shotgun as state police arrived at his home a few hours later to question him about the robbery attempt. Miller recently was released from Clinton State Prison.

The bank cashier, Chaney H. Winters, gave the note Mrs. Williams handed him to bank President John Holmes, who ordered the woman to leave and tripped the burglar alarm. Police said Mrs. Williams, who is hard of hearing, walked out calmly and was intercepted on the street.

Mrs. Williams told police Miller plotted the robbery so they could get money to go away. She had been living in his home as a housekeeper.

The driver of the car in which Miller fled was Richard Stannard, Jr., 18, a neighbor who was duped by the couple into driving them here on the pretext of shopping for groceries, police said. He was released after questioning.

Mrs. Williams told police 12 of her 14 children are living, some of them adults and on their own and others in foster homes. She has been estranged from her husband.

Finance Group Gets Pledges

HOT SPRINGS (AP) — One thousand dollars was pledged by each of 25 business leaders here yesterday for the purchase of stock in the proposed Arkansas Development Finance Corp.

The group, which met with Steering Committee Chairman Winthrop Rockefeller and Herbert Thomas Sr., a Little Rock insurance executive, also signed an application for a charter for the corporation which would provide a ready source of capital for new and expanding industries in the state. The finance corporation was authorized by the 1957 Legislature.

Rockefeller said the group set June 15 as target date for acquiring 75 additional pledges totaling $75,000. At that time, he said, the backers will meet again to elect 15 to 25 directors from the list of stockholders.

Yesterday's meeting was held prior to the opening session of the Arkansas Bankers Association convention here.

The first human to travel more than two miles a minute was a New Englander named Fred Marriott. On January 27, 1906 at Daytona Beach Fla. he drove a Stanley steam-powered racing automobile at a speed of 127.66 miles per hour.
